Professional Experience

My name is Amanda Stephen and I am a Certified Public Accountant (CPA) and licensed attorney in Washington State. I was born, raised, and educated here in the Puget Sound area. I have a JD, MPAcc, and BA from the University of Washington. I started my career as a financial statement auditor at Ernst & Young in Seattle. As a senior auditor, I planned and executed financial statement audits for several publicly traded companies in the manufacturing industry.

In 2007, I left Ernst & Young to attend law school. I graduated in the top 15% of my class and was fortunate to receive a judicial clerkship at the Washington State Court of Appeals in Seattle. After my first clerkship, I went on to serve another clerkship for a different judge. In 2014, I started my own law practice which focuses on legal research, legal writing, and appellate law.

I began teaching online courses for City University in 2017. In addition to teaching auditing and business law classes, I also co-facilitate the New Faculty Orientation program. Before coming to City University, I spent more than six years as an instructor for Becker Professional review where I taught review classes for the Audit and Regulation sections of the Uniform CPA Exam. In 2015, I was recognized as a “platinum” level instructor for my average student evaluation score of 5 out of 5.

I enjoy getting to know each of the students in my class and am always happy to take extra time to explain a new concept or go over homework and test scores. I strive to give real life examples of the concepts covered in class and provide feedback to students that will help them succeed in their current and future careers.
