Professional Experience

Christine Malone has worked in the healthcare field for over 30 years, holding positions including dental assistant, medical receptionist, medical assistant, x-ray technician, medical clinic director, and consultant to healthcare providers. Christine joined City U in 2013 as an Associate Professor and Program Directors of the BS in Healthcare Administration Program.

Outside of work, Christine is involved in healthcare politics on both the local and national level. In 1999, her third child, Ian, was injured due to medical negligence during his birth. Ian lived four years before succumbing to his injuries in 2004. This was the genesis of Christine's work toward improving patient safety in healthcare. Christine has contributed to legislation that is now law both nationally as well as in Washington State. She is a nationally recognized advocate for healthcare reform and has appeared on the Today Show, NBC Nightly News, ABC Nightly News, the CBC's The National, in the New York Times, The Los Angeles Times, and on Salon.com.
