Steve Cave is an educator and a writer. He has taught at City U since 2017, and has been in education for the last 15 years. He's also been a professional writer for those same 15 years, first as a sports writer and content manager, then as a technical writer and now as a creative writer with published stories, poetry and essays. He also launched his own tabletop games company this year, called Cavewolf Games, with a successful Kickstarter campaign! Steve also writes interactive novel apps for Choice Of Games, and keeps involved with the academic side of creative writing through presenting at the International Association for the Fantastic in the Arts.
